Systems Portfolio Rationale

When following systems you should never rely on just one golden goose to lay golden eggs. Treat horse racing systems like trading on the stock market: keep a portfolio.

No sensible stock market investor would just buy shares in one company, and no sensible system follower should just rely on one system.

If you just follow one system you are leaving yourself open to bad losing streaks which can deplete your bank and dent your confidence in a system.

It is far better to run many systems all at the same time. Doing so will iron out any fluctuations in performance. Just as a share price can go up and down, a systems performance can go up and down too. If you run various systems (covering different methods just as a share investor would cover different market sectors) throughout the year, you should be able to keep on making profits.
